she has fought for democracy
she has fought for women's rights she has fought for peace.
her fight continues.

on september 25 former prime minister to pakistan benazir bhutto graced us with her presence in the packed granite state room, inspiring us not to take for granted our freedom but to use it to help the rest of the world to become free and to be at peace.

if a man loses anything and goes back and looks carefully for it he will find it, and that is what the indians are doing now when they ask you to give them the things that were promised them in the past; and I do not consider that they should be treated like beasts, and that is the reason i have grown up with the feelings i have . . . I feel that my country has gotten a bad name; and i sit sometimes and wonder who it is that has given it a bad name.

on november 12, the murkland courtyard was aglow with the candlelight of some 80 participants in a speak-out against sexual harassment, set up by and attributed to the women of unh. the group gathered in support of anita hill, former co-worker of u.s. supreme court nominee clarence thomas, who claimed to be sexually harassed by thomas 10 years ago. hill was an impediment to thomas' confirmation hearings, but her story was not taken to heart by the committee that eventually appointed thomas to his present position as supreme court justice.

participants of the speak-out lit candles to represent their coming forward to speak against sexual harassment and against those who use it to gain power over both women and men. many people bravely stood in front of the group and told frightening stories of sexual harassment that had occurred in their lives and resulted in feelings of helplessness and victimization. their similar experiences had brought them together to salute the bravery of all victims of sexual harassment and to support the courage of anita hill, who showed the world that sexual harassment cannot be stopped by only one person. we must all work together to stop the abusive system that persecutes the victim instead of the perpetrator, or as one woman said, "to speak out in our own voices" against sexual harassment.

my mother stood on the steps crying uncontrollably and i tried to console her. "don't be sad," i told her. "i'm only going to be an hour and a half down the road. i'll come home a lot to visit . . . i'll miss you . . . god, i'm nervous . . ." and then i cried uncontrollably too.

that was five years ago, the day i left for college. now this is my home, and i'm leaving again to make a new home somewhere else. and guess what — right now i'm crying uncontrollably.

how do we say goodbye to a place that changed us so much? a place that made us laugh, cry, dance, and sometimes have nervous breakdowns. every day i think about how much of a relief it will be to finally graduate. i'm completing yet another phase of my life, and now it's time to wander off somewhere else. but how do i say goodbye?

i think it's the dancing that i'll remember most — dancing down the MUB hallway at the excitement of finishing a long, grueling paper, dancing to feel-good music with my closest friends, and most of all, dancing with my lover in private.

i'll also remember the crying — crying because i got a bad grade and i knew i could have done better, crying out of frustration with political issues, crying about what the hell i'm going to do with my life.

i can't fathom what my life will be like when i leave unh. for so long this place has been what i know — it's engrained in my head. here are the people i care about, here is where i grew to love writing, teaching and learning, here is where i found everlasting love.

but that's all over, right? it's all behind us and it's time to move ahead without looking back. we've simply completed yet another phase in our lives, only to struggle through more.

when you look through this yearbook, don't cry uncontrollably like me. think of your future, the places you'll go, the things you'll accomplish.

only remember this. unh will stay with you for ever. it will remain inside you like a solid granite stone.

rock the vote

It all started with an address in rolling stone, student senators sarah broadmeadow, mark fischler, and joel solekln wrote to rock the vote, looking to increase voter registration among unh students in the new hampshire primary, held february 18, 1992. their efforts brought rock the vote to campus, resulting in over 3,000 students registering to vote in the seacoast area and a 10 percent increase in voter turnout in durham since the 1988 primary.

enlisting the help of several organizations and students, rock the vote hit campus with information tables set up in the mub and went door to door, urging students to register to vote. they helped students to fax in their birth certificates and passports, still required by the durham town hall in the registration process, despite a 1990 election law repealing the need for them. instead, the durham town hall extended the registration period from feb. 8 to the week before the primary, allowing students extra time to provide identification.

rock the vote also provided free entertainment for students who registered, featuring p.m. dawn, mojo nixon, o positive, follow for now, drivin' and cryin', and the premiere of the movie "wayne's world." there were appearances by stars william baldwin and sarah jessica parker, along with mtv coverage.

although there were concerns of bribery with this free entertainment offered, sarah broadmeadow commented, "the right to vote should be fun — put the party back in political party."

local music

rural new hampshire, full of backward hicks chewing on long stems of hay, mesmerized by oreo-cookie cows, and talking in long laid-backed drawls. the teens hop in their red mud-covered pick-up trucks and listen to the local folk music on the radio... not!

f y p n c f y

our little new hampshire sea-coast rocks hard and fast. local talent runs wild in abundance and there are more bands than one can keep track of. this year has been full of firsts, lasts, and more to come. clubs have become more receptive to local music with the popularity of hampton's hang five and the new entertainment center in the nub. we've seen the crushing split-up bobhouse and mr. rabbit, milo turning to rock-n-roll.

t a k t g a i y
h n s o r v t

thanks to gravity's release of two cd's, and fly spinach fly's success at uconn's national band competition and their subsequent shot at mtv's "dodge rockin' campus bash" contest in daytona, there's been the success of savoy truffle's tour of the country, and the biggest boost to local music the creation of play hard record label.

the seacoast music scene has been a well-kept secret in new hampshire, but things are changing fast. someday, while watching a rock-god on mtv, you may realize . . . hey, he was in my chemistry class.

a time bomb exploded on april 29, 1992 when the four police officers were acquitted for the video taped beating of rodney king. the verdict ignited riots, looting, and violence through the streets of los angeles sending a shock wave felt across the world. racism still exists. it has for years, and covering up the issue has only made the bomb of frustration more volatile and the wick of patience shorter. the whole world watched the 90 second video clip of the brutal beating of rodney king by four l.a.p.d. officers. yet our intelligence was insulted by the l.a. court and their verdict of not guilty. here on the other side of the country in the little town of durham, new hampshire students and faculty gathered to express their disbelief and lack of faith in the american "system." one can only wonder what other injustices are done by our "system" when the video camera is not there to catch it?

day in the life . . .

through out the year the granite staff has been meandering around campus shoving cameras in people's faces. we have tried to create a typical day in the life of a unh ho-hum student. our task was nearly impossible because we found that there are no "typical" students here at unh. everyone we came across had their own unique style of doing things even as simple as blow-drying hair. what we were able to produce was a sampling of the untypical students and the activities they do through out the day through out the year. so thank you for being so kind as we broke into your rooms late at night or your bathrooms early in the morning . . . this is your day in the life at unh.

wildcats 1918

everyone has some way of relieving stress — a thing we're all familiar with as college students. but what better way than to jump, flip, backdive, swing, row, skate, dribble, tackle, and sprint?

the athletes at unh will vouch for that. team sports are an outlet for the relief of stress, but they also require dedication, intense training, difficult time budgeting, and lots of enthusiasm and spirit.

this year their hard work truly paid off — six women's hockey team members and two unh graduates helped the u.s. team win a silver medal at the 1992 international ice hockey federation women's world hockey championship in finland.

the women's gymnastics team came in second at the eastern college athletic conference championship, they came in fifth in the national collegiate athletic association (ncaa) northeast regional championship, and gymnast lori brady became the first and only collegiate competitor to ever score a perfect 10 on vault.

unh football star dwayne sabb was drafted to the patriots, and hockey player scott morrow was drafted to the hartford whalers. several other men's hockey team members were also drafted.

the unh ski team hosted the ncaa championship and finished ninth in the nation, while two ski team members — maria hassett and ivar dahl — won all american honors.

unh has done it again!

these are the people who call the mub "home." we live in what is affectionately known as "power alley" — wandering the halls day and night, oblivious of what's going on in the rest of the campus community, once in a while snapping back into reality as we see a student come in from outside, dripping wet from the rain or shivering from the cold.

these are the people who manage to squeeze time into their busy schedules to publish magazines and newspapers, promote cultural awareness and political action, lead us through the great outdoors, bring music to our ears and politicians to our pleasure or dismay.

commend these people. they work damn hard.

arts

you might think that the only place to go see great shows or listen to music would be in boston or new york city. not so. up here in the "sticks" flourishes a music and theater department offering some of the best shows in town. all productions are done by hard working professors and students at the paul creative arts center, and every performance packs a crowd. so for great entertainment at half the price, you don't need to go all the way to boston to see the stars, you can see them blossom here just by cutting across campus.

when we leave unh we will never forget the never-ending disruptive atmosphere of dorm life. false fire alarms forced us to crawl out of bed at four in the morning, stand outside in the cold for an hour, and climb back up 10 or so flights of stairs in order to go back to bed. every once in a while, we would receive a fierce warning about our illegal toaster ovens or microwaves. sometimes we would enter the bathroom on a sunday morning and find a not so pleasant sight — testimony from saturday night's overindulgence — on the floor, in the shower stall, in the sink. it could be anywhere. and just when we finally relax peacefully in our rooms, some guy would burst in and test our excruciatingly loud smoke alarms to insure our personal safety.

but as much as we had to sacrifice, we can't forget the things that made it all worth it. a dorm is a community in itself; everyone is in it together. how can we fail to become intimate with the people we study, eat, sleep, party, cry, and laugh with every single day and night? and where else could we have a conversation with our neighbor while we're taking a shower?

after the dorm comes the apartment. the difference here is that we have to worry about monthly bills, we have to cook our own food, and we live with only a few people instead of hundreds. but after dorm life we suddenly appreciate the privacy and freedom more than we ever could have dreamed of. of course there are new problems — "you left dirty dishes in the sink again," "who ate my ben & jerry's?" "do you have to bring someone home every night?" but roommates will be roommates . . .

"what is it?"

"i don't know!"

"are you gonna eat it?"

"nah, i think i'll hold out for the salad bar. at least i can recognize that!"

each day this conversation occurs hundreds of times. "where?", you might ask, "does this ritual take place?" the dining hall. the mecca of thousands of starving students in need of sustenance. the food is not always that bad, chickwich day and stuff shells are notable exceptions. actually, the food here is good when you consider how many people are served during the day in each hall. there are three separate dinner choices and a complete salad bar not to mention the never ending soft serve ice cream machine. so even if the food does not always look edible, there is plenty of choice and always enough for every one.

scene: laundry basket in anonymous bedroom

"hey, did you hear her talking spanish in her sleep last night man?" said levi's. "i think she's been working just a little too hard. man, she never lets us pile up like this."

"it's a good sign," said black sock. "shows she's learning."

"shows she's nuts," said gym sock. "what she needs is a good long trip outdoors. got to groove with nature. good for the soul. a weekend in the mountains would do her wonders. and she keeps talking about getting a bike but she hasn't even gone looking yet," said the wool sock.

"she can't find the goddamn time to stick us in the wash!" shouted levi's. "when the hell's she gonna find time to go bike shopping or running up and down mountains?"

"there's time for everything if you make it," spoke black sock.

"oh, shut up," murmured gym sock. "you and all your philosophy bullshit. you never make any sense."

"you're just ignorant," said black sock. "the only place you ever see is the inside of a nike cross-trainer."

"hey, do you think that if we all pushed real hard we could tumble out of the basket onto the floor so she'd get the hint that it's getting a bit too crowded in here?" asked levi's.

"now that's a good idea," said gym sock.

"are you crazy?" screamed black sock. she's so stressed out from school, the last thing she needs is to see her laundry relocate itself. that'll push her right over the edge. boy are you guys thoughtful.

"hey, peace dudes," said wool sock. "it's only a matter of time before she has nothing left to wear. black sock is right. school is stressful enough without her laundry protesting."

"well she's waited just too long for my nose to handle. i'm gonna jump right off the top of this damn pile," said gym sock.

"you don't have a nose," said lace. "it doesn't matter, and i hear her coming. get ready for some excitement!"

"no! don't do it!" screamed black sock. "you don't know how serious this is!"

"she'll lose it for good!" screamed wool sock. "don't jump!"

"here i go!" shouted gym sock. "today is laundry day!"

greeks

some live in dorms, some live in apartments, and some live in greek houses. the most beautiful houses at unh are not located off durham point road but on garrison and stratford avenue. they are huge monumental places that all have their own unique characteristics. they are also of where 20% of the student body will become members and live. to be greek at unh does not just mean living in a big and beautiful (at least on the outside) house, it is to be a part of a community of friends and partners. to be greek is to sacrifice one's time for the good of another or to give support in times of need. the greek system of unh is a group of independent individuals who have joined together to improve the community and themselves throughout their college years and beyond.

*Congratulations Kimberly:
Four great years — Providence, UNH, London, Boston, Disney. Reach for your star, don't miss the magic of the moment.*

Dad, Mom, Scott, Amy

Spud (allas Chuck),

You are just as sweet
and wonderful as you
were when you started school.

We love you!
Mom and Dad

Jene —
Remember the day we took you to school — You have come a long way and we are so proud of you.

Love,

BEST

life has to offer

Years ago, i heard a wonderful story about a boy growing up on a farm in the deep south. when the time came to begin school he tested out as a genius. well, of course, the local educational establishment was delighted. genius was not a common occurrence in his little town. he breezed through the public schools, finishing early. honors and attention came easily to him. he went through college and graduate work on a series of scholarships and ended up working on his PH.D. in philosophy at one of the most prestigious north-eastern schools.

he had demonstrated true brilliance. he was the darling of his professors who treated him more like a colleague than a student. there was tremendous sense of what he would accomplish and, as he was nearing the end of his graduate studies, the president of the university called the young genius in for a talk. he explained to the student that the offers would begin pouring in fast and furious. they would be dazzling, the president said. he must choose carefully. teaching, research . . . whatever the choice, it would have great consequence in his life.

A black and white photograph of a street scene. In the foreground, a road with white lane markings curves from the bottom left towards the right. To the left of the road, there is a grassy area and a row of multi-story brick buildings with many windows. Large, leafy trees are scattered throughout the scene, with some branches reaching over the road. The sky is bright and appears overcast.

the young man looked at him for a moment and said he had already made his choice. he intended to do just what he always wanted to do; go back to his home and run the family farm.

well the president was aghast. twenty years of schooling, scholarships, devotion of his tutors, the tremendous expectation of his success. "why on earth," asked the president, "would you go through all of this if the only thing you wanted to do was work on a farm in a cultural backwater?" "well," said the young man, "to tell the truth . . ."

think about while i was

and my best friend.

i would also like to thank all the granite staff who stuck with me to the end. priscilla your photographs have given the book a special flavor. thanks for all the extra time you gave to this book. dana, for putting up with me and all my crazy antics on the long days we worked together. your book will be great. kris, for coming up from rhode island to finish the ads. lori, for getting all the team pictures and layouts done. and mike, the seniors as well as i owe you a big thanks for finishing the senior section.

also special thanks don harley for being my mentor everytime a problem arose. to media services and sports information for all their help in getting us pictures. and to cole and jeff our taylor publishers for making the granite so solid.

you have all taught me a little something in life, i'll miss you. au revoir!
